

Darcy Antonellis
President
Warner Bros. Technical Operations

Darcy Antonellis serves as President, Warner Bros. Technical Operations, a post she has held since January 2008. In this role, she influences and directs Warner Bros.' technology strategy and vision to leverage growth and new business opportunities associated with technology and advancements in media and entertainment innovation.

She joined Warner Bros. in 1998 as Senior Vice President, Distribution Technologies & Operations, Warner Bros. Technical Operations, where she had oversight of the Company's transition from traditional distribution technologies to advanced digital distribution. Before joining Warner Bros., Antonellis worked for CBS in a number of senior management roles.

A member of the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences and a Fellow of the Society of Motion Picture and Television Engineers, she was selected to Video Business Magazine's Women Elite List and named to The Hollywood Reporter's 2010 Digital Power 50 List. Antonellis is also a two-time Emmy winner for technical production and was honored with the 2011 NAB TVNewsCheck Women in Technology Leadership Award.

Antonellis received a master's degree in finance from Fordham University and honors for work in the field of electrical engineering from her undergraduate alma mater, Temple University.