Puneet loves building teams that create amazing products!

I am passionate about building diverse, high velocity teams which build products backed by readily deployable, high quality software; continuous improvement; and, most importantly, having a fun time while at work. I have been a part of various product organisations focused on delighting the customer with the best experience they can have. I have also consulted clients for project rescues, project inceptions, custom application delivery, continuous delivery & deployment, and agile coaching.

I am a very hands-on polyglot developer with special interest in Android, iOS, NodeJS and concurrent programming. I have advanced knowledge of mobile application development, micro services architecture and cloud computing platforms. I enjoy working on the design, implementation and scaling of large distributed platforms. I also like wearing a devops that and building continuous delivery pipelines for complex platforms.
